DataSys Expands Web-based Training Classes

Marlboro, Mass. – January 1, 2018

In 2016, DataSys Corporation launched its Web-based training program designed to meet the ongoing training needs of Microsoft Dynamics GP clients. Given the demand for this training, DataSys will offer over 30 Web-based training classes in 2018.

“Training is at the heart of our commitment to our clients,” explains DataSys President Lisa Daigle. “It was part of our mission statement when we opened our doors in 1996 and it’s just as important in 2018 as we head into our 22nd year.”

Over the years, DataSys offered an extensive roster of classes as its training center in Marlborough, MA. Now, in an increasingly virtual world, Web-based training allows DataSys’ clients to participate from the comfort of their offices or homes. Given increasingly busy schedules in accounting departments, an obvious benefit of online training is to eliminate travel time and still take advantage of training conducted by a live instructor.

Daigle continues: “Even in a virtual environment we still limit the class size so the training can be personalized. And, there’s plenty of time allotted for Q&A. We want our clients to come away with in-depth knowledge, whether we teaching to first-time Great Plains users or customers with extensive knowledge.

DataSys’ flexible training options include classroom training at its office, training over the Web, and training at customers’ offices.
